Extended

The following is an update from our Missionary, Jeff David in Costa Rica:

"Several weeks ago I went to the emergency room with severe chest pains. The attending emergency room doctors ran all the tests to see if I was having a heart attack. The results of the ECG and ultrasound were negative, but the blood test returned with traces of the enzyme that the heart releases when it lacks sufficient oxygen, which usually happens during a heart attack. I was admitted to the hospital, and the cardiologist ordered an angiogram to take a peek at my arteries. There is some blockage there, but not enough to merit a stent or any other invasive procedure."

"However, the iodine-based dye that was pumped into my veins for the angiogram provoked a virulent allergic reaction and I had to spend three more days of "vacation" in the hospital. After all the tests and probing, the conclusion is that I'm part of a small percent of the population who has heart spasms. The condition is easily treated with meds, but it can provoke or be a precursor to a full-blown attack. So I'm being obedient to doctor's orders and taking my meds."

Please remember to pray for Jeff and his family as they face the challenge of dealing with health issues.
